

Music by James Gilbert

Copyright Permission Letter

This letter grants you special permissions not ordinarily allowed for under US copyright law and answers some frequently asked questions about copyrights and how it applies to our music.

Permissions and restrictions:

The single copy of music you purchased (including score and parts, whether in paper form or a computer file) is considered the master copy.

- You may make copies that are needed by you or a single organization you represent in order to perform or rehearse the piece.
- Please restrict the use of this music to one performing group at a time. School districts, non-profit groups and churches should purchase a separate master copy for each school, group or church that will use this music.
- Individuals and groups possessing the original master copy may perform this music at educational functions such as school concerts, festivals, workshops and contests.
- We ask that you please do not give, loan, sell or rent this music to anyone. Please have them buy their own copy. It doesn't matter whether or not money changes hands.
- In the case of schools, non-profit groups and churches, you cannot use copies of the music at another school, group or church without first purchasing a master copy for each school, group or church that might be using the music.
- You may transpose instrumental parts in orchestral, ensemble, solo, duet and trio music to fit changing instrument needs
- You may not change, add to or remove instruments, measures, notes or words from the music.

Questions we have been asked

- Can we perform the music for a non-church audience?
Can we record the music?
Can we broadcast the music?
In short, NO! Existing copyright law is very restrictive about recording, performing or broadcasting music, even if the intended audience is shut-ins or relatives of the performers and regardless of whether you charge money for the recording. Drop us a note if you need to record or broadcast our music. We recommend that you review existing law. Please do not assume you can perform (outside of a church service), record or broadcast the music just because you have purchased a copy.
- Is any of your music covered by the CCLI license or similar licensing companies?
NO! The CCLI license does NOT apply to any of this music nor is it covered by any other licensing company.
- Can I print out the music or import it into an electronic music display device? Can I load mp3 files into my mp3 player? Absolutely. (Please don't share mp3 files with others).

The music contains certain security features that will allow us to know whether it is being used in accordance with this letter. We reserve the right to seek civil and/or criminal damages for improper use of this music.
